The Nakasendo Trail!

During may, I went to Gifu and Nagano to walk the Nakasendo trail with my friend Michael. It was about 20km long, and although it was quite hot, the scenery was breathtaking! I had a lot of fun and want to do another hike along this path in the future!

Mt. Fuji

Just this month I climbed Mt. Fuji. This has been a goal of mine since I was very young. I wanted to see the beauty of Japan from its tallest place, it was very difficult, we even had to hike overnight, but it was definitely worth it. This is be a memory for a long time.

Tottori

With my wife and friend, we went on a group day trip to see the Tottori sand dunes as well as the museum. I was expecting the dune to be quite small, but I was shocked when I saw just how large it was. We were all beyond impressed by the detail of the sand sculptures! Pure art!

Kamikochi & Matsumoto

In may I visited the city of Matsumoto to see their famous castle, and eat their famous chicken dishes. Also, I went to the Japanese alps to visit a place I've wanted to go for a long time; Kamikochi, the views were stunning and the weather was absolutely perfect.

Nara

Once again, My wife and I visited Nara to say goodbye... For now! We decided to walk the Yamanobe Michi, an ancient road connecting Nara and Asuka. Just like the Nakasendo trail it was very beautiful, with lots of huts along the way to drink water and taste local food! We of course, spent some time in the city, and went to our favourite temple, 二月堂

Mitoro Fruits Park

Finally, I made sure to visit some of the local sightseeing spots. My wife and I love to go to Mitoro Fruits park, have a picnic, and enjoy the ice cream as well as the atmosphere. It doesn't hurt that we also go to one of our favourite coffee spots called "Ueda" on the way over to see their beautiful cat.
